KAISER'S MINISTER OF WAR IS DISMISSED

He Had Supported Army Increase With Considerable Reluctance.

BY LA MARQUESE DE FONTENAY.

In order to understand the Kaiser's virtual dismissal of his Minister of War, General von Heeringen, and the clean sweep which has been made of the heads of the principal bureaus of the War Department, it is necessary to explain that the bill just enacted by the Reichstag, providing for the considerable increase of the standing army, at enormous expense, was only supported with a good deal of reluctance by the dismissed minister and his principal subordinates. When the measure was first mooted by General von Moltke, the chief of the general staff, it was not merely opposed by von Heeringen, but actually opposed by the Kaiser himself. The Kaiser had insisted on the bill going through, and after it had received the vigorous and enthusiastic championship of the Chancellor and chief of the other ministers, to whose advocacy in the Reichstag the success of the measure was due, that the chief of the War Department consented to endorse it in a sort of half-hearted manner.

There has always been a certain amount of bad feeling between the general staff and the War Department, due largely to jealousy and to fears that the one was usurping the powers and prerogatives of the other. This has been intensified during the tenure of office of General von Heeringen, Minister of War, to the manifest disadvantage of the German army as a whole.

It is in order to put an end to this that the Kaiser has appointed a new Minister of War, in the person of General Eric von Falkenhayn, whom American officers that took part in the international expedition in China in 1900 for the relief of the besieged Peking, will recall as a particularly popular figure, serving on the staff of Field Marshal Count Waldersee. General von Falkenhayn is the nineteenth cabinet minister appointed since the accession of Emperor Wilhelm, a quarter of a century ago; from which it may be seen that the terms of cabinet office are not unduly prolonged at Berlin. It is only fair to add that those of the Ministers of War have been much longer than in the case of the heads of the other departments.

General von Falkenhayn is a relatively young man of the age of fifty-two, and, during his military career, put in three years of service in China as military instructor of the European troops there. He is a very agreeable and tactful, with singularly charming manners, making friends everywhere, which was not the case with his predecessor in office, and may be recalled that his elder brother, General Eugen von Falkenhayn, was the chief mentor of military governor of the crown prince and of his brother, Prince Eitel from their tenth year until they attained manhood.

The new Minister of War is a warm personal friend of General von Moltke, chief of the general staff, and is thorough sympathetic with all his views, and it is worthy of note that the new heads of bureaus in the War Department are all very much younger men than those whom they have superseded, and are, moreover, in closer touch with the general staff, so that there is likely to be henceforth complete harmony between these two great branches of the administration of the German army.

A curious legend prevails in the northern portion of Scotland with regard to the snow-topped mountain, Ben Wyvis. Forming part and parcel of the huge territorial possessions of the Duke of Sutherland, it is a matter of widespread Scottish belief that if the snow cap of Ben Wyvis were to disappear, the ducal house would be overtaken by ruin and irreparable disaster. During one long not summer in the nineteenth century, there was a severe consternation among the tenants and gillies of the district, when it was discovered that the snow on Ben Wyvis had all but disappeared. Only a tiny area, a few feet square, remained, and people came from miles around and climbed the mountain with mats and rugs, by means of which they were successful in saving the precious patch of snow from the sun's rays.

During the past few weeks of intense heat in the United Kingdom, the snow cap has again dwindled almost to vanishing point, and has been a source of intense anxiety to the people of Sutherland, coinciding as it did with the mortal illness of the late duke, who has now been gathered to his fathers. But, according to latest accounts, the danger of Ben Wyvis is over for the time being, and the title to the estates, which in that part of the northern kingdom embrace the entire County of Sutherland, remains secure to the new duke, hitherto known as the Marquis of Stafford. The late duke is the first of his line to be entombed in the new family mausoleum which he caused to be built in the grounds around his Sutherland castle of Durnburgh. His father and mother, as well as his grandfather and other ancestors, repose in the mausoleum at Durnburgh, the beautiful place in Staffordshire which he was obliged to abandon as a place of residence and to dismantle, by reason of the pollution of the river flowing through the property, close to the mansion, and which rendered the latter impossible as a place of residence. The duke presented the house and a portion of the grounds at Durnburgh, under certain conditions, to the borough of Stoke-on-Trent, although it was the industries of that town and in the vicinity which had poisoned the river and driven him from his favorite home.

The new duke is Scotch only on the distaff side of the house, through which he holds his Scottish honors and estates. In the male line the duke is descended from a very old English family, namely, the Gowers, who fill a notable place in history, one of them being on record as having needed Edward II's pardon for having put an arrow through the back of the king's favorite, Piers Gaveston, in 1312. Another of the family was standard bearer to Prince Edward, son of Henry VI, and fell in the battle of Tewkesbury, in 1471. During the Civil War the Gowers remained loyal to the crown, and suffered in consequence. Nor was it until 1763 that the Gower of the day, that is to say, Sir John Leveson-Gower, was elevated to the peerage.

The surname of Leveson had been adopted because of the marriage of his grandfather, Sir Thomas Gower, to the first Duke of Bridgewater, a descendant of Mary, sister of Henry VIII. Owing to this marriage, the Duke of Sutherland is entitled to quarter the royal arms. The son of this George by name, married in 1758 Elizabeth, Countess of Sutherland, in her own right, eldest daughter and heiress of the nineteenth Earl of Sutherland. She owned the vast Sutherland estates in Scotland, her earldom dating from 1657. She was a very remarkable woman, and spent much of her time in Versailles, where she was the intimate friend of Queen Marie Antoinette. It was on the strength of this marriage that her husband was advanced from the marquise of Stafford to the dukedom of Sutherland, his wife being popularly known as the duchess-countess.

The new duke, who has succeeded to an income of $1,500,000 a year, and whose territorial possessions surpass in extent the armies of many petty sovereign states of Continental Europe, married last year Lady Eileen Butler. She will be remembered in Canada as the daughter of that Earl of Lanesborough who was military secretary at Ottawa during the governor-generalship of Lord Grey. REFUSES TO PAY, AND IS MURDERED

White Man Shot by Mulatto Woman After Taking Her Whiskey.

Martinsville, Va., July 14.—John Joyce, a young white man about twenty-five years old, was shot and killed near Critz, in Patrick County, yesterday morning by a mulatto woman named Gilley, of this county. Joyce went to the woman's home yesterday morning with a companion, who called for a pint of liquor. The woman handed out the liquor and Joyce took it and announced his intention of not paying for it. The woman seized a Winchester rifle and shot Joyce dead.

Sheriff Boaz later went to her house to arrest her. After making the arrest, and as he was leaving with his prisoner, the woman's nine-year-old son, resting the rifle in the window, fired four shots at the sheriff, none of which took effect. He was arrested, and both mother and son were lodged in jail at Stuart.

Joyce was a married man and leaves a family.

BIGGEST WARSHIP FOR UNITED STATES

Constructors Now Preparing to Lay Keel of Fighting Monster.

New York, July 14.—The naval constructors at the New York Navy Yard in Brooklyn are busy completing the arrangements for the laying of the keel of the battleship No. 39, which is to be a sister ship of the new Pennsylvania, and which, with that ship, will share the honor of being the world's largest and most powerful, both offensively and defensively, superdreadnought ever constructed.

The keel of the newest superdreadnought will be laid down on the ways vacated several months ago by the new York, now nearing completion and almost 6,000 tons bigger than the yard. The new ship will not be known long as No. 39. In a few weeks the Navy Department will announce its permanent name, which, it is believed, will be either the Arizona, the New Mexico or the North Carolina.

31,400 Tons Displacement. When completed the new dreadnought will displace 31,400 tons, which means that it will be a vessel twice as big as the famous old armor-plated world flagship Connecticut, more than 11,000 tons greater than the dreadnoughts Delaware and North Dakota, and almost 6,000 tons bigger than the mighty Wyoming, the new flagship of the Atlantic fleet.

No. 39 will be 608 feet long, 37 feet wide, and will have a speed that must reach a maximum of twenty-one knots an hour. More than 1,100 officers and men will be required to man it, and it will be fitted to burn oil as well as coal. Its engines will be of the latest improved turbine type. It will cost, exclusive of armament and armament, about $7,435,000. When ready for commissioning it will have cost the government about $16,000,000.

The armament will consist of twelve fourteen-inch guns, mounted in turrets, all of which can be fired in a single broadside either to port or starboard, four submerged torpedo tubes that will be supported by the conning tower, and a battery of twenty-two five-inch guns, in addition to a battery of guns of smaller calibre.

In the construction of No. 39 more than 1,000 skilled mechanics will be employed, and it is the hope of the naval constructors to have her ready for launching some time in the late spring or early summer of next year. It will probably be about three years before the new ship will be ready to take her place in the first division of the Atlantic fleet. Naval Constructor John E. Bulley, United States Navy, will be in charge of the construction of the new York, which will also be the directing head of the construction corps in charge of the new ship.

Of the new Dreadnoughts now in process of construction, the Texas is the nearest completion, the latest report showing that she is more than 90 per cent finished. The ship, the Texas, is 371 feet long, 31 feet wide, and displaces 10,310 tons. The Nevada is 371 feet long, 31 feet wide, and displaces 10,310 tons. The Oklahoma is 371 feet long, 31 feet wide, and displaces 10,310 tons.

The navy yard will be visited and inspected to-morrow by the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House of Representatives. Chairman Padgett will head the visiting Congressmen, among whom will be Congressman Gregg, of Texas; Talbot, of Maryland; Hobson, of Alabama; Mason, of Arkansas; and Turner, of Louisiana; Rordan, of New York; Turnbull, of Virginia; Tribble, of Georgia; Buchanan, of Illinois; Bathrick, of Ohio; Lee, of Pennsylvania; Foss, of Illinois; Witherspoon, of Mississippi; Henson, of Montana; Ko of Wisconsin; Butler, of Pennsylvania; Roberts, of Massachusetts; Loud, of Michigan; Bates, of Pennsylvania; and Browning, of New Jersey.

The committee will come to New York on the private yacht "Mayflower" and after inspecting the big plant in Brooklyn will proceed to Newport, Boston and other Eastern cities to inspect the government plants at those ports.

WILL GET CHANCE AT 'PIE' COUNTER

Way Opened for Many Democrats to Enter Government Service.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

Washington, July 14.—Examinations will be held at a number of points in Virginia on August 16 to select eligibles for the internal revenue service. Announcement made here to-day to this effect will give those persons in Virginia who desire to enter this service an opportunity to do so within the near future.

The cities where the examinations will be held and the dates are as follows: For the second and sixth Virginia collection districts, Fredericksburg, Newport News, Danville, Lynchburg, Roanoke, Staunton, Charlottesville, Petersburg, Richmond, Abingdon, Alexandria and Winchester. Candidates are desired to take these examinations should see that their applications are in the hands of the Civil Service Commission by August 11.

All persons engaged in the internal revenue service in Virginia, with the exception of the two collectors, are in the classified service.

In the sixth collection district there are five office deputies, six division deputies, four stamp deputies, one pipe line deputy, four deputy collectors assigned to the revenue agent. In the second district there are eleven office deputies, six division deputies, two stamp deputies, one pipe line deputy, and one deputy assigned to the revenue agent.

It is stated that it is optional with the new Democratic collectors who will shortly be appointed whether or not they reappoint the present deputies.

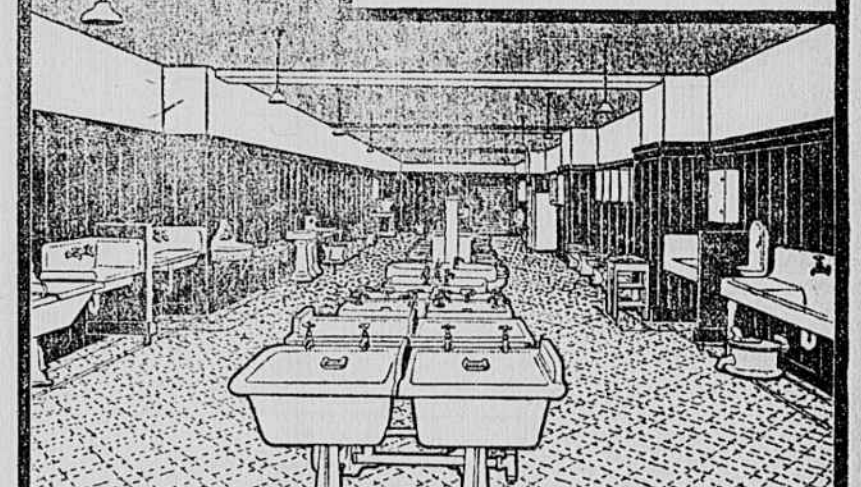

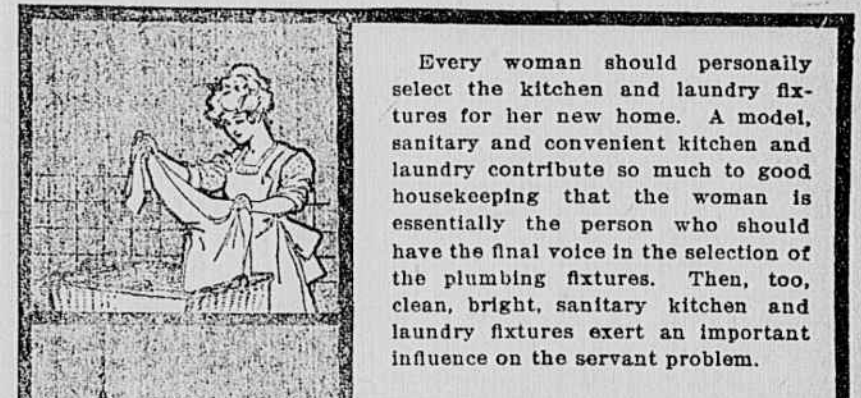

All names must be taken from the eligible list. That these examinations are soon to be held should be encouraging news to Democrats, who have so far stood by only to see Republicans remain at the pie counter.

The pressure upon the government authorities has been strong, and at last the Democrats are to be given an opportunity to fill the places which rightly belong to them under a Democratic administration, and which, up to the present time, have been held by Republican appointees.

Every woman should personally select the kitchen and laundry fixtures for her new home. A model, sanitary and convenient kitchen and laundry contribute so much to good housekeeping that the woman is essentially the person who should have the final voice in the selection of the plumbing fixtures. Then, too, clean, bright, sanitary kitchen and laundry fixtures exert an important influence on the servant problem.

It's very easy for every woman of Richmond and vicinity to learn all that is necessary about kitchen and laundry plumbing fixtures. A part of one floor of the Virginia-Carolina showroom is devoted to a display of such fixtures. You are welcome to examine these fixtures, without any obligation whatever. This showroom is maintained for your service, and you are invited to make use of it.
